

Dr Rishi Palpu

A champion for progress. A leader with a heart.

Rishi Palpu was born into a family of entrepreneurs but he did not inherit success. He built it. From industry to activism, he understood early that leadership is not about positions. It is about making things better. For years, he has fought for economic empowerment, social justice, and industrial growth. Not from the sidelines but in the thick of it. As National Vice President of the World Human Rights Protection Commission and State President of the National Employers Federation, he pushes for policies that uplift businesses, workers, and communities alike. But Rishi is not just a man of boardrooms and policy meetings. He is where change happens.

On the ground. In the streets. With the people. Listening. Engaging. Acting. His political career began with the BJP where he rose quickly, chairing the State OBC department and the BJP Industrial SME Sector. But when the ideology conflicted with his principles, he did not hesitate. He walked away. Because true leadership is not about staying comfortable. It is about standing for what is right. He did not switch parties. He started over. Joining the Indian National Congress, he did not demand a title. He earned respect. He worked from the ground up, standing alongside those who needed a voice.

His philanthropy is not a side project. It is a way of life. Through his family foundation, he has transformed lives, especially among marginalized communities. Not with promises but with action. Rishi is more than a politician. He is a connector. Between power and people. Between policy and progress. Between influence and impact. He works with opinion leaders, religious heads, media, and entrepreneurs, bringing together the voices that shape society. He is not about power. He is not about fame. He is about leading with his heart and changing lives. And that is exactly what Rishi Palpu does.

A Life Rooted in Service

Rishi Palpu does not believe in charity for the sake of it. He believes in impact. Through the Dr. Palpu Foundation, named after Dr. Palpu a social reformer and one of the founders of SNDP Yogam, he has transformed lives where it matters most. Education for those who cannot afford it. Healthcare for those who have none. Support for those left behind.

When the world shifted online, he made sure underprivileged children were not left in the dark, providing mobile devices for their education. When crises struck, he ensured families had food on their tables. His philanthropy is not about grand gestures. It is about real solutions.

But his vision goes beyond aid. He fights for Kerala's traditional industries, from handloom weavers to small-scale manufacturers, ensuring they do not just survive but flourish. He sees heritage not as a relic but as a foundation for progress. Growth should not erase identity. It should strengthen it.

The political visionary

Rishi Palpu does not just believe in politics. He believes in people. A committed worker in the Indian National Congress, he operates where real change begins—at the grassroots. His vision is clear. Development should include everyone, not just those at the top.

His leadership is not confined to party offices. As Managing Trustee of the Dr. Palpu Foundation and President of the Kerala State Ornament Workers Union (INTUC), he fights for industries, workers, and communities that form the backbone of Kerala. His mission is simple. A Kerala that works for all. Impact that speaks for itself

A Legacy in the Making

His vision is not a distant dream. It is unfolding every day in the lives he touches, the industries he revives, and the policies he helps shape. His leadership is not measured by speeches but by impact. A handloom weaver who finds new markets. A small business owner who gets the support to grow. A worker who stands protected because someone fought for their rights.

Rishi Palpu does not wait for change. He drives it. In boardrooms and factory floors, in community halls and policy meetings, his presence is felt where it matters. Not with promises, but with action. Not with noise, but with results. Progress is not just about the future. It is about making today better than yesterday. And for Rishi Palpu, that work never stops.
